

CDL Technology rebrands and is now CRUATECH

After two years of operation CDL Technology has rebranded to CRUATECH. The company decided to create a new brand that demonstrates more about what they deliver to their customers. Cruatech is a Technology Company which delivers outsourced software development services and develops their own applications. The word “Crua” is a reference to the Gaelic word for “hardware” and since they work in the hardware integration space they felt it represented them well. Cruatech has been planning the development of it’s own software applications for some time. Cruatech commenced trading to service requirements of immediate projects from a US PSIM software company.

They have also developed their own product Cruatech Deployment Utility (CDU) which allows their customers to cut down on implementation days by importing and sorting sensor and node data for easier implementation and less expensive consultancy time on-site.

For more information : <http://cruatech.com/>