The MA in Data Protection and Privacy Law provides students with expertise in both law and computing. This MA offers unique interdisciplinary training which will allow students to become experts in a rapidly expanding field with significant employment opportunities.

The programme will offer students a systematic understanding and a critical awareness of the legal and technological issues at the forefront of data privacy. Graduates will possess advanced expertise in the technological and legal best practices needed to design, assess and build data protection and privacy solutions.

Modules offered include: EU Data Protection Law, Data Governance, Comparative Privacy Law, Data Management and Visualisation, European and International Human Rights Law and Cloud Architectures.
