INTRA Programme Bachelor of Arts (Hons) in Economics, Politics and Law (DC230)

Overview

In the first two years of the course, there's an equal weighting of the three disciplines.

Three compulsory research methods modules taken in year one by students will provide core learning skills that they will use throughout their degree and career. In years two and three, modules will further enhance their knowledge of research methods and dissertation skills in all three disciplines. These skills will provide them with the necessary tools to analyse major issues affecting our world today from an economic, political and legal perspective. In year three, students take a core module in each discipline. After that, they are free to specialise in one of the three disciplines or continue to study a combination of all three.

Careers

Economics, Politics and Law graduates find work in public service and private industry in international and European institutions in:

- Tax/financial services
- Law
- Journalism

- Policy-evaluation

- Research

They also pursue:

- Further studies in teaching
- Higher degrees in economics, politics, law, international relations, business and journalism
- Careers as trainee solicitors, on successful completion of relevant entrance exams
